Her Mother Overtakes Her at Mayville and Tress Her Back to Vasser, Where She Will Be Guarded

FALLS IN LOVE WITH THE STAR

Vaman, Mich., March 2 .- The Murby & Doyle Cemedy company worked" this town hard in several different ways. They were on the boards at the opera house for several nights, and narrowly escaped financ al wrack. They were next billed to play at Columbiaville. Before they left wever, one of their number Vasaar, however, one of their number succeeded in enamoring with his sweet voice a fair Vasaar maid, the daughter of a local lawyer. The sun had set but once after the departure of the company when the girl left Vasaar on the pretext of making a visit out of the city with a friend, but instead she got off at Mayvill, where the company was announced to appear that night, and allowed the young star, to whom she had surrendered her affections, to take her in charge. She, being a good singer, appeared that night on the stage with the company, and posed as a soubrette.

The following night, however, while the performance was at its height, the wings of the fair songstress were most suddenly clipped. Her mother appeared at the entrance to the hall, stalked swiftly toward the stage and passed behind the scenes. The details of the scene are not made public, but they were undoubtedly far more interesting and dramatic than anything which the company did in their public performance. The mother soon reappeared with her erring child and took the train back to Vassur.
